

Dear Friends of my art,

Here is a quick note to tell you of my three upcoming shows this Winter/Spring season.

First, I will be back with a solo show at Cambridge Health Associates beginning January 20, Martin Luther King Day, and running until April 20th, Easter. The venue is a lovely welcoming space where body workers and therapists practice, and my work hangs throughout the public areas. There is parking in the back.

Concurrently, I will un-hang the pARTners group show at Gallery 1581 in Brookline and bring lots of my own work to show in the next semester, beginning January 2, Groundhog Day (all these holiday dates are accidental but kind of amusing, no?) This work will hang at least until the Fall semester at BGSP where it is housed. There is lots of parking on Beacon St.

I work in person in the building Thursdays and Fridays and I could easily meet you there for a walk-through at lunch hour.

And last but not least, I will have another guest show at Three Stones Gallery in Concord from February 19th through March 30, Mother's Day. There will be an opening reception Saturday, March 1, with a snow date the next day. I will be there with bells on, or at least boots!

Please join me at the opening March 1 if you can or let me know of another date when you can come, and I may be able to meet you there. It is a lovely gallery, and I am in excellent company with other artists. Parking in the back.

I am waiting to hear if I will have work accepted at upcoming exhibits at Concord Art Association and Cambridge Art Association as well. I'll let you know when I know. I entered small sculptures in the Concord show for the first time. Fingers crossed.

Thanks for keeping my work in mind!

Best wishes for the New Year,

Mara
