

Dear Friends of my Art,

The grand re-opening of “my” gallery, Gallery 1581 inside the Boston Graduate School of Psychoanalysis, was even better than I could have imagined. The work entered was wonderful and my team pitched in fully when I came down with Covid halfway through hanging. Phew! The show, pARTners, will hang through January 31 with proceeds going to our mental health initiatives and student scholarships. Those of you on Instagram can see photos on my account @aberdeentreehousestudio.

I will be doing a walk-through tour of pARTners on Thanksgiving Friday afternoon the 29th if you would like to drop in and see it with me, and another one Friday January 3rd at noon

I will be showing small work at Concord Art Association and Bromfield Gallery this holiday season; both are nice ways to find affordable gifts for the art lovers on your list. I’m pretty excited to be in the SOWA district for the Bromfield Show!

And Galaray House in Lexington is full of nice things as well, several of which are my larger collages. Check out their excellent coffee bar when you are there.

Soon I will have big splashes at Three Stones Gallery as a guest artist (February and March), and Cambridge Health Associates (January – April) for a solo show, both for my third exhibits there. I'll get you the dates when I have them.

And I will hang some of my own work at Gallery 1581 in Brookline when the pARTners show comes down.

Unfortunately Stylish, the antique shop in Belmont where I have exhibited for several years, has closed their brick and mortar store, but fortunately I have several nicely framed things to show from there now because of it. You can still find their gorgeous furniture and lighting on stylish.com along with some of my work.

That's it for now. I hope to connect with you over the holidays in one way or another, if only to hear how you are doing. And if you don't want to keep receiving this newsletter, just let me know and I will unsubscribe you without being offended 😊

Warm wishes,

Mara
